Captain Keith Fargo's 29-year naval career involved many facets of logistics including procurement, inventory management, distribution/warehouse operations, and logistics IT systems. Before entering the Navy, he received his Bachelor of Science in Business Administration from the University of Southern California. He attended the U.S. Navy's Officer Candidate School and was commissioned as an Ensign in the Supply Corps in 1974. While in the Navy, he attended the University of California, Berkeley and received his Master of Business Administration in 1983.

As a career Navy Supply Corps Officer, Fargo served in logistics and management assignments at numerous shore activities and on ships, including submarines. He led logistics organizations that procured and managed material ranging from commercial off-the-shelf supplies to complex nuclear reactor plant components. He served in business management positions that planned and executed financial and personnel resources. He directed joint logistics for worldwide contingency operations, including providing munitions, fuel, transportation, and other logistics support. Captain Keith Fargo retired from the Navy in 2003. Following his naval career, he was a consultant for Booz Allen Hamilton until 2013. At Booz Allen, he led supply chain process improvement efforts and developed logistics managements procedures for U.S. Navy clients, including the Naval Special Warfare Command.

In retirement, Fargo has been active in non-profit organizations, including Naval Submarine League Pacific Southwest Chapter (Treasurer-9 years), YMCA San Diego Overnight Camps (President/Board Member-14 years) and Coronado Historical Association (Treasurer-2 years). His hobbies include golf and sailing.
